KCFI news director moonlights as Wartburg prof

BY JENNIFER HEANEY

Every weekday at 4 a.m., a quiet country home is awakened by the sound of an alarm clock. Before long, the aroma of coffee circulates about the house.

To get up at a time when the rest of the world is still sleeping comfortably demands some true recognition.

Pat Blank, KCFI Radio news director, doesn't look at early rising as an action deserving praise but rather a part of her job.

"Believe it or not, the first thing I do is make coffee. I need to have at least a few cups in the morning," she said.

At 4:20 a.m., Blank's trusty red truck pulls out of the driveway and sends her on the 25-minute trip to work.

Blank's "official" day begins with the satellite news feeds from the Radio Iowa network.

"I set the tapes up to receive the feed and then set to the task of ripping wire copy and rewriting stories for the first newscast at 6 a.m.," she said.

After spending time over the airwaves reading the news and giving updates, Blank heads to meetings or press conferences, returning just in time to check wire feeds again and rewrite for her noon newscast.

Blank enjoys the job and the challenges of news gathering. When she heard about a job opening at Wartburg for an adjunct professor to teach radio production she "jumped at the opportunity."

"I think it's important for people who are doing radio production to be taught by someone doing radio production on a day to day basis," Blank said of her teaching position.

As one watches Blank walk across campus or sip her afternoon cup of coffee in the Den, it is interesting to note she knows the names of almost everyone she meets.

"When I worked in College Relations here (at Wartburg), I felt it part of the business to know everyone I was dealing with. I still think it's the most important part of what I'm doing now," she said.

At home, Pat spends time with her deer, mini-donkeys, peacocks, wild turkeys, dog and cat.

"The animals are my time to relax. I think it's important for people to take at least an hour of each day for themselves. For me it's my animals and aerobics," she said.

Pat enjoys the busy lifestyle spending mornings delivering news and moonlighting after that as a professor. The two jobs weave together to create a strong and independent woman.

Be assured that as the sun rises above the horizon tomorrow, the red truck will be there to greet it.

Bishop addresses December grads

Thirty-three graduates listened Sunday in Neumann Auditorium as Bishop Steven Lee Ullestad advised them to "be strong. Fear not."

Ullestad, '75, installed as bishop of the Northeast Iowa Synod of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America in September, gave the keynote address at Wartburg's mid-year Commencement and Baccalaureate Worship.

The bishop also received an honorary Doctor of Divinity degree from the college as part of the exercises. He is currently completing a Master of Sacred Theology degree at Wartburg Seminary in Dubuque.

Graduates include: Legni Francisco Amaya Bu, Mary Ann Behnken, Matthew Gerald Duffee, Rodney Lawrence Duroe, E'Lynn Sue Ellis, Michael A. Foelske, Denise L. Garthwaite, Mark Andrew Gorton, Thomas George Haurum, Jennifer S. Hogie, Douglas Hinrichs.

Cottam, students feel sting of theft

BY JOEL BECKER

"I feel totally violated. It really is scary that these people know all kinds of things about me," said Associate Professor of Sociology Doris Cottam.

On Tuesday, Cottam had her wallet and checkbook stolen while she was teaching class.

Four boys about high school age were seen by Cottam wandering in the hall when she was teaching her Juvenile Delinquency class.

During a break in class, she realized that she had left her purse out in the open in her office. When she picked it up she noticed that it felt lighter and discovered the wallet was gone.

"There wasn't any money in my wallet, but there were sentimental items," Cottam said.

When she discovered the wallet was gone she called the Waverly police. It was then that Cottam found her checkbook was also missing.

Cottam has had to cancel all her credit cards and get a new driver's license.

The thieves missed an envelope in her purse that contained the profits from her church soup supper.

Incidents similar to Cottam's theft have been reported in Waverly recently. Cottam says the police think it was the same group that robbed her.

"They pick places where they look inconspicuous," she said.

Cottam also said that things have been taken elsewhere on campus, but it is not known if the same group is responsible.

Food Council donates money to Food Bank, Toys for Tots

BY JOEL BECKER

Where did that money go?

On Nov.19, students signed away their dinner in the Meal Fast initiated by Lori Brockman, '93, and Renee Benzel, '93, for their Leadership Theory and Practice interdisciplinary course.

As part of the class, students had to develop projects that would benefit the community in some way. Brockman and Benzel decided to organize the Meal Fast as a way to promote recognition of the hungery and to help the survivors of Hurricane Andrew.

They approached Food Service with their idea and it was approved on the condition that Food Council would get half the proceeds to do with as they wanted. Approximately 800 students signed away their meal, valued at $3, raising a total of $2424.

Half the money went to the Red Cross for the Hurricane Andrew Relief Fund. The other half went to Food Council. They chose to split it between the Waverly Food Bank and the Waverly Toys for Tots.

The donations were made on Dec. 10 and 11.

SAC says goodbye to Hollywood

BY ANGELA WILGUS

Starting Winter Term there will be a new policy for films on campus. This will affect the amount of films available.

The national film company, where the Student Activities Committee obtains its films, is abandoning the college's public performance license in lieu of a new system that could cut down the amount of movies seen from 2-3 a weekend to 4-6 a term.

"We will no longer be able to show [films] without paying more costly royalties," T. Todd Masman, Student Activities director, said.

Carolyn McBride, '95, films chair, described the new system as starting to pay on a "film per film basis." The old system allowed SAC to pay a set fee.

"We could have as many as we wanted," said McBride.

The contract for the new method goes into effect at the beginning of Winter Term. According to Masman, estimated costs will range from approximately $150 to $500.

This also applies to residence hall programs, the Den and the Dragon's Lair.

No explanations offered without comment

In case you haven't been keeping up on your reading, the Trumpet used the F-word in a direct quote last week. At the suggestion of Jan Striepe, director of parent and alumni relations, I was going to explain the Trumpet's reasoning behind its use. But now I'm not going to bother.

One reason I'm not going to bother is because a newspaper can't spend all its time defending its actions. There just isn't enough time in a day.

The other reason is lack of motivation among our readers. I personally haven't heard many negative comments about last week's editorial. But I know they're out there.

Several of my friends have told me about conversations they have either been part of or overheard. And the general consensus is that many people were displeased.

So where are the letters? Where are the cancelled subscriptions? They are nowhere to be found.

My purpose as editor is not to intentionally cause trouble. It is to make people aware. And what a great lesson can be learned from this. If people spend all their time complaining and never taking any action, nothing will ever change. So they have no right to complain in the first place.

But they'll probably complain about that.

Your comment counts in the Trumpet.

All readers are welcome to write letters to the editor. Letters should be no longer than 150 words and should be typed. The Trumpet reserves the right to edit letters according to Trumpet style and as space dictates.

All letters should be sent to the Wartburg Trumpet no later than Thursday afternoon.

Trumpet editorials are the opinion of the editorial board.

Thanks for the memories, George

Guest Column

Michael Evans

Soon it will be time to say goodbye to our friend George Bush. He has given us so many wonderful memories that I decided to pay homage to him.

To honor him, here are my top 10 favorite mistakes Bush made. In fairness, I will not even mention "read my lips" or Dan Quayle. I wouldn't want anyone to say I'm not an objective writer.

10. The Republican National Convention. If it had been any more right wing, it would have been a neo-Nazi gathering or a Marge Schott interview.

9. Calling Bill Clinton a bozo. It's not that he didn't sound presidential, but I missed his classic insults like "liberal" and "soft on crime."

8. "I wanna be the education president." In four years his only ideas were school vouchers and prayer in school. Prayer in school? We need to pray for our schools.

7. Response to the question "How has the economy affected you?" Bush responded, "We all have to pay higher prices!" And people think Quayle is stupid?

6. Questioning Clinton's character. If character is so important, how the hell did we get Nixon?

5. Doing nothing in office. If that's not bad enough, he didn't even look like he was doing anything. Even Norm Peterson looked more active than Bush during the past four years.

4. Debating Clinton. If he didn't, people might have called him a chicken. But he would have been better off. I guess Bush wasn't on the debate team in high school.

3. "We are not in a recession." This was very reassuring to the millions who lost their jobs.

2. Attacking Ross Perot. Everyone thought Perot was a joke, but Bush went too far. At least Clinton made it look like he respected Perot.

1. Running for re-election. He could have been remembered as a bad president. Instead, he will be remembered a bad president and a horrible campaigner.

Alumnus applauds banned floor shirt

Hello Wartburg!!

I am glad to hear that Hebron Ground has moved to the forefront of interesting concepts for floor shirts. My sophomore year, 1988-89, and also my first of three years on Ground, we moved ourselves into a dimension of intrigue regarding our floor shirt design.

Our first floor shirt design, which was well liked by the floor, was rejected by the residence hall director. We were really upset with this censorship by the RHD and Student Life Office. There were many heated discussions among the members of the floor, some of which included an underground floor shirt.

We were nearly ready to go ahead with the rejected design when we decided to compromise. We removed parts from the original design until it was unacceptable to us. It was then back to the drawing board.

We came up with a design that was acceptable to both Student Life and the floor members. We did retain the most objectionable part of the original design in an altered form. The RHD didn't even notice until we pointed it out to her.

To this day I still wear my Hebron Ground floor shirt with pride, but I still like the original design better. This is then to say to the members of Hebron Ground, "Hurray!!" At least you weren't subject to censorship like we were. Freedom of expression is one of the freedoms that is greatest in this country.

Warburg's international outlook often false claim

One of Wartburg College's stated goals is to pursue an international outlook. This is evidenced by its study abroad programs, its Intercultural Certification and its recruitment of international students.

Yet, the college's actions seemingly contradict these goals. Comments by some professors and students regarding international and minority students seem to bely this intent. While these comments are not always purposely malicious, people should realize they can and will be misconstrued.

We understand that not everyone will develop a long-lasting friendship with an international or minority student. But this campus needs to develop an awareness of the contributions all people make to the Wartburg community.

Perhaps rather than making negative, tactless comments, we as a community need to make a concerted effort to accept differences and realize they are beneficial rather than detrimental. Only when this happens can Wartburg claim it has a truly international outlook.

Editorial falls short of expected quality

Well, another issue of the Trumpet has been delivered to my mailbox. After reading the editorials in the Dec. 7 issue, I found something lacking in the content of the issues presented.

Let's be serious here, are the seats in Neumann Auditorium really a debatable issue? Sure, they are not the most comfortable seats that I have been in. Still, I think that there are many other topics that would be a little more appropriate for the caliber of newspaper that the editors are trying to achieve with the Trumpet. How about the administration's lack of forethought in not cancelling classes before Thanksgiving Break?

I think that the editorial board needs to reexamine what goals they are trying to meet by writing these editorials.

Res Life staff thanked for their hard work

We would like to publicly acknowledge the energy and commitment the Residential Life Staff has exhibited this term. Often their work goes unappreciated or unnoticed. This term they have been an inspiration and help.

We wish them success during their tests and an enjoyable holiday.

'Fantastic' solos highlight jazz band concert

BY BRADLEY WOOD

Despite freezing weather and icy sidewalks, Legends was packed for the jazz band concert last Wednesday evening.

Jazz Band II, under the direction of Dr. Robert E. Lee, warmed up the audience with a few tunes. My favorite, added to the program at the last minute, was their rendition of "Sweet Georgia Brown."

The Knightliters Jazz Band, under the direction of Al Jacobson, took the stage next. Their opening number was "Norwegian Wood," a lively piece that showcased the band's talent.

Some other personal favorites included their next piece, "Julianne," by Jeff Steinberg; "Love for Sale" by Cole Porter and "Tribute to Miles," a tribute to Miles Davis.

There was a wide variety of fantastic soloists featured in all the numbers, and they all did a great job. I must mention Eric Maassen, '93, who played lead alto and was soloist for a number of pieces. He has a great sound and was enjoyable to listen to.

The "solo section," or jazz band small group, was a bit different. They played two pieces that featured Maassen on alto saxophone, Ron Morlan, '95, on trumpet and Aaron Johnson, '94, on trombone, along with the rhythm section. My uncontrollably tapping foot proved this "solo section" was thoroughly enjoyable.

One of the most impressive things for me to see was the number of people in the concert who had also been involved in Christmas with Wartburg. To perform four days in a row and then turn around and do another concert two days later shows a great deal of talent and dedication.

It was nice to hear the bands perform in Legends, the perfect intimate atmosphere. Both bands did an excellent job and the concert was a nice break from studying.

Symphony's gift beyond equal

Wow!

That's about all that can be said of the Waverly Community Symphony concert Sunday afternoon in Neumann Auditorium.

Continuing its holiday tradition, the symphony presented Tchaikovsky's "Nutcracker Suite" as Mary Fain from KUNI narrated the story.

The story of the nutcracker was preceded by "A Rhapsody on Christmas Carols" as children from Waverly and Longfellow Elementary School in Waterloo decorated the Christmas tree on stage.

Listening to the moving carols, it seemed a shame that Christmas music is played only once a year. Especially when it is played as well as it was Sunday afternoon.

The other highlight of the concert was the dancing by Co'Motion Dance Theater. One concert-goer said to me afterwards that she was kind of disappointed with the dancing.

But it really didn't matter if you were a fan of modern dance or not. The true beauty of the dancing was seen not in the choreography itself, but in the faces of the Waverly children performing.

Co'Motion was in residency at St. Paul's Lutheran School last week. Students who worked with the troupe performed the dances Sunday.

Conductor Janice Wade, the musicians, Frain and the dancers gave a Christmas present without equal.

Fat Bertha is coming

From their beginnings at Steb's Amusement in Cedar Falls, Fat Bertha's progressive rock sound has attracted a large local following.

Fat Bertha is composed of native Iowans Jeff Eastman, George DeVore, John Fetter and Marc Barry. Devore is a Wartburg student.

Since their first performance in Oct. 1990, Fat Bertha has toured across Iowa and performed with nationally-known bands like Trip Shakespeare.

Fat Bertha's members have performed with over 20 musical groups including the UNI and Wartburg jazz bands and the Waterloo-Cedar Falls Symphony.

The band's straightforward sound has earned them a place on the latest Iowa Compilation Album.

Fat Bertha will play at Wartburg on Saturday, Jan. 9 in Legends. The band Soul Drain from Des Moines will open the show at 8 p.m.

Admission is free to students with a Wartburg ID. The cost is $2 for all others. The concert is sponsored by the Campus Activities Board (CAB).

Tour planned to see 'Miss Saigon'

BY JENNI BLOCK

Wartburg students will have the opportunity to see "Miss Saigon" in Chicago this January according to Jan Striepe, director of parent and alumni relations.

The trip is being planned as an alumni tour, but anyone is welcome to go. Tickets are still available for the 2 p.m. performance on Saturday, Jan. 23, 1993. Tickets cost $55. A ticket with a luncheon and tour of the theatre is available for $80. Viewers must provide their own transportation to Chicago.

"Miss Saigon" is a story set during the Vietnam War. It is one of the most impressive musicals ever made, featuring an 18-foot statue of Ho Chi Minh and a helicopter that is 75 percent of the actual size.

Women rout opponents at Cornell Tourney

BY MIKE WAUGH

The Lady Knights have picked up right where they left off last season. The women, who were 23-4 last year, are giving every indication that they will be just as good this year.

They destroyed the competition at last weekend's Cornell College tournament. They improved their record to 6-0 with wins over Cornell and Iowa Wesleyan. Both games were won by an average margin of 50 points. Wartburg defeated Cornell 93-38 Friday, and beat Iowa Wesleyan 69-24 in the championship game Saturday .

The Lady Knight's defense was the deciding factor in both games. They forced a total of 83 turnovers in the two games, while committing only 35.

Kathy Roberts led Wartburg with nine rebounds in the first game. Jodie Schult added six. Roberts again led the rebounders Saturday with 10, and Laura Berkeland had eight.

"Right now we are doing a very good job of playing team defense, especially on our press," Severson said.

Severson also said that the caliber of opposition was not very strong at the tournament, but that she was pleased to see everyone was able to contribute to the wins.

"It's always good to get everyone some experience this early in the season," Severson said.

Six Wartburg wrestlers finished first in Saturday's Dick Walker Invitational at Wartburg, helping the Knights finish first.

Wartburg finished with 157 1/4 points, ahead of second-place Augustana with 129 1/4 and third-place Buena Vista with 97 1/2.

Finishing first for the Knights were Zane Braggs at 118, Kevin McCarthy at 142, Michael Doyle at 158, Lance Christenson at 167, Brad Tholen at 177 and Jon Dawley at 190.

Michael Doyle had to face Eric Kimball in the championship match at the 158-pound bracket.

Other Knights who placed included Paul Wilkerson, 5th, 110; Chris Ristau, 3rd, 126; Stephen Wood, 6th, 142; Tom Hogan, 3rd, 150; Eric Kimball, 2nd, 158 and Jesse Molinar, 6th, Hwt.

Kain, Leary help men win two

BY PAM MYRES

The men's basketball team won two home games this week to boost their record to 5-2.

Wartburg beat Clarke Tuesday in a high scoring game 102-80 and then held off Northwestern Friday 78-68.

Both opponents shot three-pointers well. Clarke scored 27 points off three-pointers, and Northwestern scored 30.

Wartburg got off to a quick start against Clarke by scoring the first 12 points of the game, on their way to a 47-31 lead.

Wartburg continued its dominance in the second half by consistent shooting and making 14-19 free throw attempts.

With 30 seconds left, Ed Veasey made a three-pointer that put Wartburg at 100.

Rob Kain led Wartburg with 28 points and 13 rebounds; Matt Leary scored 21 points.

Wartburg trailed 37-40 at halftime against Northwestern.

Kain and Doug Hall scored two baskets at the beginning of the second half to put Wartburg ahead 41-40.

Brian Farrell stole the ball off an inbounds pass, shot and got fouled. This crowd-pleasing three-point play put Wartburg in the lead 56-50.

Northwestern caught up by several three-pointers, tying the score at 60-60.

Wartburg went on to win, as Northwestern fouled them nine times in the last six minutes.

Kain and Leary led the Knights with 29 and 24 points. Top rebounders were Kain with nine and Farrell adding seven.
